

Sass Believes That New Structure Is In Class By Itself

COUNTY CHIEFTAIN PRAISES BUILDING

Supervisors' Chairman Says
It's 'Last Word'

BY CHARLES SASS
Chairman, Board of Supervisors
Sept. 7, 1932, will always mean considerable to me because on that day, I was unanimously elected chairman of the Bay County board of supervisors to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Frank A. Hewitt.

The building committee had progressed rapidly as far as plans and specifications were concerned, and I certainly was glad to have a more active part in a new county building that will stand for untold years to come.

You can imagine how I felt that night after I got a few moments to myself and had gone over what had taken place at the board meeting. It is a big honor to head up the county's governing body, but to look after the affairs of Bay County, as free from debt as it is—well, I felt that I had taken on a real job.

But as the days went on and the building took shape, and as I came more and more familiar with the real workers on the board of supervisors and the officers of the county, I realized what an honest-to-goodness organization we have. The new building, in my estimation, is the last word in design and as to conveniences, I can say that probably there is no other public building in the country that can compare with it. When it comes to workmanship I want to say that is A-1. I was in and out of the building during its construction—maybe once a week on the average. I did not miss much of what was going on—we certainly got one hundred cents value to the dollar.

I want to take this opportunity to congratulate all those having anything to do with the erection of the building, not only in its design and construction, but because they saw to it that the specifications were lived up to.

It will be a pleasure to do business in the new county building and I am looking forward to noticing the looks on the faces of the people when they actually see what they voted for. I know they will be entirely satisfied. It is a real job—well done and we are proud of it—proud of the part we have had in its erection and proud, too, because a "local boy" Joseph C. Goddard originated the design and looked after the erection of the building in all its thousands of details.

There is no question but what the principles of NRA will con-

EXPERT SEES CODES AS PART OF AMERICAN LIFE

Texas Doctor Declares Those Who Think NRA Principles Temporary
Due For Surprise

FORT WORTH, Tex., March 11.—Persons who believe NRA recovery codes are a temporary thing in American economics are due for a surprise, believes Dr. E. A. Elliott, head of Texas Christian University school of economics and an NRA official.

The recovery codes will become a permanent part of the American economic system, Dr. Elliott believes. "There is no question but what the principles of NRA will con-time," he said. "However, these will be modified from time to time to provide a maximum of benefit to the greatest number of people. The codes will become the basic constitution of industry."

Lot in Los Angeles Suburb
Has Produced Six Oil Wells

LOS ANGELES, March 11.—One of the most valuable single lots in the world is located at Santa Fe Springs, suburb of Los Angeles. It was revealed in a court action here recently, when witnesses said six oil wells on the lot had produced $5,000,000 in oil during the past 12 years.

PREHISTORIC MAN IS SOUGHT IN MONTANA

Paleontologist Spurred By Fossil Finds

RED LODGE, Mont., March 11.—(UP)—Eastern Montana, scene of many fossil finds, may have been the "cradle of mankind," in the belief of Dr. J. C. F. Siegfried, Montana paleontologist.

Spurred by this belief, Dr. Siegfried hopes to launch at Bear-tooth Butte one of the greatest and most specialized "man-hunts" ever carried on within Montana's borders, he revealed today.

The search would be for remains of the prehistoric man, who Dr. Siegfried long has believed, once inhabited this area. The Red Lodge scientist said that he plans to bring into the Red Lodge district specialists in the separate fields of science dealing with the history of man. A lone believer for years that Montana might hold the secret of man's mysterious beginning and establish herself as the site of the long-sought-for Garden of Eden, Dr. Siegfried's hopes were bolstered here last summer, when members of the International Geological Congress visited this region.

Shirt 40 Centuries Old Given
Place in Boston Museum

BOSTON, March 11.—(UP)—A mere shirt now has a place of honor at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. Found in the tomb of Giza by an expedition from the museum, the shirt is elaborately pleated and estimated to be at least 40 centuries old.

Ten-Year-Old Murder Is Solved In France

Police Bare Weird
Mystery Facts

PARIS, March 11.—(UP)—An international hunt, which may extend to the American continents, has been launched by the Surete Generale for an alleged murderer who owes his liberty to the very organization now seeking his head. The story might have been conceived by a detective thriller writer.

A beautiful woman found shot to death on a beach—her identity revealed several years later by a former spurned admirer known as Nemo—The crime solved after ten years, revealing how a once toast-of-the town was condemned to death by a family council—And the killer running free on distant shores because expelled from the country for a lesser offense committed after the murder.

June 11, 1923, inhabitants of Trepport found in a desolate spot along the Channel coast, the body of a woman killed by four revolver shots. The murderer had dragged his victim to the waterline erroneously speculating the tide would carry the body away.

Despite swift action by the police—fishermen testified having heard four shots near the boardwalk on the dunes a little before midnight—the slayer made a clean getaway. The victim was buried, the case pigeonholed. Year after year passed, erasing the murder from the public's memory. Then, only a few months before the date when the case of the prosecution would automatically be voided by default, the Dieppe police began receiving anonymous letters.

The notes at first were vague and ascribed to a harmless crank. They came from Paris and tersburg. Her popularity had made her rich. Ziffer, it is alleged, decided to put Helene out of the way when he had lost all her money in an unsuccessful commercial venture in Cracow. Accordingly, a family council was held, Ziffer, his brother Joseph who was a resident of Paris, and their sister, Mme. Lola Rosenberg, wife of a Cracow attorney, since dead, "condemned" Helene to death at a family council, in order that Waldemar Ziffer might marry a wealthy widow, says the Surete Generale. Brother Joseph was designated as the executioner. With a bonus of 3,000 francs in his pocket, Joseph is alleged to have seduced his brother's wife and absconded with her to France. On a dark, windy night on the beach of Trepport, well known watering place, and threw her body to the waves, it is charged. A year later he was arrested on a charge of attempted robbery, sentenced to 13 months in prison and expelled from France. In the meantime, according to police, he had sent a postcard to Mrs. Rosenberg in Cracow, saying "All went well," whereafter it is said that she immediately appropriated all the late Helene's belongings.

Waldemar Ziffer, too, married his rich widow. Now, according to reports from Poland, he and Mrs. Rosenberg are under arrest as accomplices in the murder.

Joseph Ziffer, who is now 34 years old, is said to have been traced to London, where the track was lost. It is believed he may be on his way to South America under an assumed name.

Police allege that Joseph Ziffer explained his sister-in-law's disappearance to friends by saying she had "gone to South America with a rich rancher."

Papers and coins removed from the cornerstones of the original Bay county courthouse, have been turned over to the Bay County Historical society by Circuit Judge Samuel G. Houghton.

PLANS NEW EFFECTS FOR WORLD'S FAIR

Century of Progress Head
Completes Study

CHICAGO, March 11.—(UP)—Rufus C. Dawes, president of the Century of Progress, has nearly completed plans for improvements and additions to the 1934 exposition. Officials are concentrating especially on new effects for the lagoon, which will make it one of the outstanding fair features.

According to present plans, floating auditoriums and theaters will be built out from the three bridges connecting the mainland and man-made island.

The three water displays of last year will be torn out and a fountain, designed to be the largest in the world, will be constructed between the two southernmost bridges. It will affect a wave of solid water 1,000 feet long and 75 feet wide, obtained by streams spouting from pipes arched to 35 feet. Through the medium of this large wave the illumination experts of the fair will be able to produce fantastic designs and colorings.

The midway amusement district south of the 23rd street entrance, has been moved to the north end of the island and its location will be occupied by a street of villages.
